Officials of both agencies caution message-senders that emergency messages must be about real emergencies. In recent years there have been long distance calls asking conservation officers to find John Jones "somewhere near Newberry" to tell him Aunt Agatha was visiting at home. Hunters who want to "hole up" away from civilization for the season need not register, of course. But conservation and state police officials recommend it to insure peace of mind, and declare no hunter will be disturbed except for delivery of bona fide emergency news.

How Free Is "Free Range"

A statute on the books of the State of Michigan and passed by a State Legislature many years ago gives the Board of Supervisors the right to declare free range for cattle in their county if they so desire. It also gives the Townships the right to control and govern it.

Some years ago the Crawford County Board of Supervisors voted "free range" in Crawford County which because of the large percentage of state and federal owned land in it makes it ideal "free range".

However, two difficulties have arisen because of the Board's action many years ago. First, some neighboring counties had or did vote out "free range" and cattle men who lived close to the borders of our county began the practice of driving their cattle over into Crawford County and turning them lose. This was to some extent corrected by the border townships voting certain restrictions on "free range" within their respective boundaries.

The second difficulty has been the tremendous increase in the flow of traffic through Crawford County on the main arteries of travel and the consequent collisions with cattle and horses roaming free on the road and shoulders of the roads. Although to our knowledge no human life has yet been lost as the result of such a collision—it is not a remote possibility that it could have resulted and might likely happen.

In all probability, the Crawford County Board of Supervisors have not talked over this phase of the prob-lem since, they many years ago voted "free range" here. It is an item of utmost importance as several county and out of county residents can testify as the result of injuries and damages suffered as the result of collisions with domestic animals along the county's highways.

With US:27 — the Main Street of Michigan — running the full length of the county from north to south, we feel that the problem needs immediate discussion and possible action.-R. W. S.

Well, we're all for progress, but that's one new idea we just don't cotton to. A round biscuit, spread nicely amidships with snappy country cheese, looks like a biscuit! And accompanied by a mellow glass of beer, it's a combination that you can't improve on!

So at the risk of being called oldfashioned, I'm voting for round biscuits, that fit a hungry man's mouth like no square imitation ever will ... and for American beer served in the good old-fashioned way, in tall, cool mugs or ordinary glasses, with frosty sides and bubbles winking at the brim!

Senator Ferguson Reports On

The President's announcement that he is calling a special session of Congress for November 17 came as something of a surprise to those in Washington who were disturbed and aware that no concrete program of action had been formed to meet either the critical questions of foreign aids or domestic prices. No program of foreign aid is now clear to everyone that our program of foreign aids has exerted a tremendous inflationary pressure on our home markets. What we have to bear in mind is that we don't ship dollar bills abroad; we send food, and clothing and equipment—all the items, in fact, that are so short here.

A simple way out of the inflation to the control of the control program of action had been formed to meet either the critcal questions of forcign aids or domestic prices. No program of foreign aid is possible, of course, until returns are in from the various fact-finding groups that are powering the field.

Beyond that he was not in a position to submit a specific course of action except to make clear he was aware of the fact that our people, who have been hearing so much about a crisis in Europe, are still deeply concerned about the price situation which is hitting them where they live.

It apparently is the President's thought that the various foreign reports the Executive Department has been collecting will be ready by November 10. On that date the Senate and House Fo reign Affairs Committees have been called to review their findings obtained in investigations and hearings held during the recess, as well as the reports from the President will propose tie in close-ly with a long-range program which is known as the Marshall made clear this week, he has no plan in a literal-sense. He merely has expressed an idea that we should likely Europe is the most likely way to preserve world peace.

That idea seems to make considerable sense. But—L proper reconstitute that Congress will examine all proposed aids very carefully. As long as we are footing the bill, not just in dollars but in terms of our own standard of living, I think Americans will want every assurance our aids will accomplish their intended purposes, that Europe does intend to help itself, and that we are not saddling ourselves with a permanent dole.

Such a close scrutiny may relieve the price pressure here. There will be suggested to Constitute that the propose tie in close-ly with a long-range program which is known as the Marshall made clear this week, he has no plan in a literal-sense. He merely has expressed an idea that we should likely Europe is the most likely way to preserve world peace.

That idea seems to make constitute the sense. But—L proper in the propersion of our own standard of living, I think amerely has expressed an idea that we should likely Europe is the most likely way to preserve world peace.

But it is a double-barreled program the President will dump before Congress. He will ask Congress for what probably will amount to a billion dollars of stop-gap aid for Europe. At the same time he also will ask for some anti-inflationary measures at home. He has described these measures as "commodity allocations and controls" without describing further to us just what he believed they should include.

The problem of Congress will lie in trying to balance the two, for it of forcign aids or domestic prices. No program of foreign aid is possible, of course, until returns are in from the various fact-finding groups that are now in the field, representing the Executive Branch and the Congress. And the price situation at home rests to a large extent on the foreign relief program.

What the President did was to recognize the fears and ferment in the people of this country, and that the situation was getting out of hand. He sought to relieve the fears by a notice that the law-making body of the nation would be called and poised for action. Beyond that he was not in a position to submit a specific course of action except to make clear he was aware of the fact that our people, who have been hearing so much about a crisis in Europe, are still deeply concerned about the price situation which is hitting them where they live.

It apparently is the President's thought that the various foreign aid is fact, that are so short here.

A simple way out of the inflationary spiral would be just to abandon all foreign relief. But to obandon all foreign relief. But to abandon all foreign relief put abandon al

Such a close scrutiny may re-lieve the price pressure here There will be suggested to Congress various control systems that may make it more easy to bal-ance the foreign problem against the domestic problem. Incident-ally there seems no indication those controls would include price ally there seems no indication those controls would include price controls as we knew them during the war, first because it would take too long to put them into effect, second because of the widespread resentment, still felt, against OPA mismanagement, and finally because of the bad effect price controls would have on production. It must always be remembered that the real answer to inflation is the production of sufficient goods to meet all buying demands.

But the anti-inflation program is so broad and so serious there certainly will be many other suggestions for relief and innumerable related problems are bound to creep into the agenda. The President's proclamation simply reads "the public interest requires that Congress be convened" and sets no limit on its scope because it could not set such a limit. Without doubt it will be the busiest special session of Congress in history. Certainly it will be one of the most serious.

W IND, broad shouldered Joel said, was just air in motion; all wind was the same. But Mannie, putting a tired hand to her head, pressing it against that spot of pain above her eye, decided that Juel must be wrong. There were all kinds of wind; but the worst was this wind that blew for days until it into your head and burned a ght band about your forehead. Joel came in to dinner. "It must et up soon, Mannie. "You can't stop the wind, Joel." When Joel had gone, Mannie washed the dishes, the pain above her eye becoming each moment more unbearable. She reached for an aspirin, thinking of Joel, and stopped. It did no good to say the wind wouldn't blow tomorrow there'd be the next year and the next.

Joel could sell the ranch and get work in a factory. She could see him in 15 years, his shoulders swing gone from his walk.

"Joel wouldn't blame ber, but be wouldn't he happy. Joel would never be bappy anywhere away from the prairie. That was what made it so hard, so impossible for her.

She looked out and nowhere was there anything but sameness, nowhere except that old bluff, border-jumped as spurs dug into him and he swung around and headed into the wind. When Mannie came to the bluff she reined in Roanie and sat looking down into the canyon. It was narrow, steep with few footholds.

She slid down from Roanie and onked down to where a thin sliver of light, water, was barely visibleit was quiet down there—the wind could never reach you. She began to climb down, her feet slipping on tho shale and stone. She rolled down the last 20 feet ignominously

She lay quiet on a tiny beach, relief seeping through her. The sun like a limp rag on the sand.

WHEN she woke clean-eyed, clear headed, the sun was slanting against the wall. It was time to get back. She could stand the wind now; she could stand anything. She glanced upwards and caught her breath. Nowhere was there a single foothold.

She proceeded cautiously, exam-shelving cave. Above the entrance was printed in rough letters: Wind-

Windhaven. Someone had been here before her. Someone had come here to escape from the wind, just as the had come.

She advanced ferther into cave and her foot struck a light object—a comb that some woman might have worn. If a woman had come here years ago, she must have had some way of getting back. Mannie hunted furiously.

It was simple when she found it.

A rough hair rope, hidden by the side of the boulder, exactly the same color as rock and shale. She seized it eagerly and began to climb. She reached the rope's end and found it anchored securely by a huge rock, invisible to those a nuge rock, invising to tagge above. She pulled herself over the rim of the canyon. She heard a nicker farther along and rounded a curve to find Roanie grazing.

She rode him with the wind behind her-but it was no longer a fearsome thing, something from which there was no escape but in flight. Windhaven—she had only to climb down the canyon to sleep securely on the small, dry beach. Why they could spend whole dayp there, she and Joel.

It looks very much as if the younger set are going to take advantage of, "Juke Box Nite" at the V.F.W. Hall and enjoy themselves. There was a fine crowd at the hall last Thursday and all of them were having fun. Remember this is a weekly occasion so come every Wednesday night for a good time. Mrs. Goshorn has donated a hand made quiit again this year and tickets are now available. Just ask any V. F. W. member about the beautiful quilt.

The first pinochle party didn't amount to much and there wasn't a very large crowd at the second but, but there were three tables and it was plain to see that some good players were present. Perhaps we can get cnough interested for a tournament.

The feather party continues to attract a lot of interested players every Friday and Saturday nights. Chickens are offered the most but there are also geese and perhaps next lime ducks and turkeys, for
